

WFLA Wisconsin Upper Michigan Scholarship

Western Fraternal Life is a not-for-profit financial services organization that gives back to the communities where members live and work.

Western Fraternal Life has a rich history covering more than 100 years of fraternalism. In the mid-nineteenth century, millions of immigrants came to the U.S. to seek the American dream. For many of the earliest members, that dream meant buying and owning land. The immigrants soon found that they needed to protect themselves and their families from life's uncertainties. Fraternal Benefit Societies began in the mid-1800's as a way to bind those with a common bond (ethnic, religious, trade, etc.) and to provide support and opportunities for financial security.

In 1897, members created a new society known as, "Zapadni Ceska Bratrska Jednota" or Western Bohemian Fraternal Association. The society would uphold the values they held dear; Truth, Love, and Loyalty. Those three words became the motto of the organization. The members believed that the lives of both men and women were valuable to households and became one of the first fraternal organizations to insure women in 1899. In 1919, members also voted to insure juveniles. As years passed and Western Fraternal Life grew, membership was opened to all in 1947. Later, it became apparent to the Association that Western needed to change its name to reflect its inclusive membership. At the 1971 National Convention, members voted to change the name to Western Fraternal Life Association.
